

THE PRESS

The Spullenmen use a heavy press to squeeze sounds out of various objects. With great care the objects are prepared. Then slowly put under pressure, until they give way, and breathe their last sigh. Bring your own objects and be surprised by the sounds they can produce, by the poetic images they leave. Creative destruction in its purest form which is guaranteed to leave a devastating impression.

CREDITS

Daniel Hentschel, Diana Wildschut, Harmen G. Zijp, Jan Schellink

CONDITIONS

This act can be mobile, from a trolley, but also works well on stage, in front of a blow up live video projection of the objects being crushed.

For the first option, nothing is needed. For the stage version a white wall or screen and a P.A. are needed

The Press cannot be played in an environment that is too noisy.

The audience can also hand the musicians objects to crush for them.

Cannot perform in a noisy environment.
